always updated (next update).Q: Optimized query to avoid FetchSes with 1 to 1 M:N relationship I have two tables: User Group A user is part of many groups. So in the User table I have a field named GroupId, and in the Group table I have a field named UserId. I am looking for an optimized query to do something like this: SELECT *

FROM User JOIN Groups ON User.GroupId = Groups.UserId WHERE Group.ID = 21 As you can see in the query result I want to retrieve the User and the Group as well. My question is, is there a better and optimized query solution for my problem? I don't want to do something like this SELECT DISTINCT(u.UserID), g.GroupName FROM User u JOIN Groups g ON u.GroupId = g.UserId WHERE g.ID = 21 because it will be a huge performance issue. Is there any way I can write a query like this SELECT *, GROUP_CONCAT(UserID SEPARATOR ',') as Users, GROUP_CONCAT(GroupName SEPARATOR ',') as Groups FROM User u JOIN Groups g ON u.GroupId = g.UserId WHERE g.ID = 21 and later using PHP loop to retrieve result like this? $subGroups = explode(';', $query); $fields = explode(',', $query); while ($record = mysql_fetch_array($subGroups, MYSQL_ASSOC)) { foreach($fields as $field) { $this->query($record['groupName'].'.' $record['users'].'.' $field); } } Can anyone please help with this? A: Generally, you need two tables to store a 1 to many relationship. The (possibly
