The in-game physics engine is also a completely new beast, giving developers the opportunity to focus on the pitch like never before. This new engine was made possible with the help of Epic Games' Unreal Engine 4, which allowed us to integrate more than 10 different high-performance PC GPUs in the engine, with graphics hardware rendering capabilities up to 4K. "With FIFA 20, we introduced a big step forward in terms of on-pitch physics," said John Schappert, Lead Gameplay Designer on FIFA 22. "With the addition of new HyperMotion technology this year, we hope to give players a more immersive experience while also encouraging new play styles and becoming more fun and realistic on-pitch." The game was also shown at GDC this year, and was a great opportunity to show off new tech the team had been developing. In this blog we will be explaining some of the new features and physics that will be presented in FIFA 22. Mega-sweep tackles One of the most exciting new elements to come to the series is the "Mega-Sweep" tackle. FIFA players have been waiting a long time for this, and it was highly requested at EA Play 2016, where we debuted this new feature. At the end of a tackle the ball goes on the ground and drops down the centre. The way we have implemented this is to throw the ball into a 3D gravity simulation, and have the ball fall onto the ground. The importance of these tackles is that the whole game is also defined by the centre of the pitch - it's just like a floor. It makes the game feel much more realistic, as you can now really destroy the opposition's midfield. Players can "bounce" off the ball as they go down, getting more control and more options. We've added two new attributes to the physics system for these new tackles. First of all we add a "PitchSurfaceForce," which is the force applied to the player as they first run into the ball. We also add a "CatchDistance" value which defines the maximum length the centre of the pitch can be from the ball. As these are new elements, we believe they online challenges with weekly goals. Select online and offline challenges and challenges are announced in the Challenge tab. Completing them will reward you with coins to buy in-game items, as well as unlock exclusive rewards. New rewards will be announced every week so you can be the first to collect them.

- NO FLYING THIS TIME • - “The bigfoot” phenomenon was overdone over the past couple of years, so EA has decided to not let their big cat bite them by not having a hairball as a challenge this time. And as we all know, Fifa’s hairball is the ultimate goal, so none of us can be disappointed!
- LIVE SOCCER • - Now, you can play games as your own custom made player made using new and improved broadcast-quality streaming technology. Create your dream team using head-to-head matchups, leagues, and fusions. You can even play with FIFA 22 Pro players on the real servers.
- NEW ONLINE GAME MODES
- ONLINE SQUAD GOALS - Now your friends can score goals together to show off on the leaderboards!
- ONLINE MATCHS - Now, five extra people can battle at once in online matches. The more players, the more goals!
- REALISTIC PLAYERS - This is the ultimate test of your football skills in a new battle for supremacy. Compete with players who know the game intimately and know just when it’s time to predict and if they’re about to score.
- MY PLAYER - All your stats and captaincy/role history is now accessible through your profile. Make your player better by watching your own highlights, as well as his other accomplishments.
- CUTTING EDGE TACKLES • - Now when you get sent off after a tackle, your knees will bend backwards in pain and actually SCREAM!! This is the best new addition to the game in a long time!
- NO MORE GOALS FOR NOBODY • - World class goalkeepers no longer get any goals in the match. Will they still try and get the
