We apologize, but this video has failed to load. tap here to see other videos from our team. Try refreshing your browser, or Suncor's big shareholders face a bad week Back to video The giants behind the Canadian oil giant — John G. Stice, Blake Deuber, Kerry Goulet, and Bob Nault — will be flying to Calgary this week for a meeting with Suncor's board of directors to get up to speed on the current business of the company. In the last few years, the four men together have amassed a portfolio of 13.5 million shares of Suncor — now worth a combined $75 million. If Suncor continues to have bad news, the shares are sure to be hammered and the men responsible for it could find themselves in the dog house with Suncor chief executive Steve Williams. The men did all right in 2008 when Suncor bucked the trend for the oil industry and saw its shares surge 29.4 per cent to $22.44, and they did even better in the spring of 2011 when the shares climbed 18.6 per cent to $25.73. And that's when Suncor made its first serious discovery in Western Canada since the 1970s — a find that got it back on its feet. But between November 2011 and April of last year, the shares lost more than two thirds of their value — a testament to how quickly things can go sour in the oil industry. That's when news broke about Suncor Energy getting slammed with a $100-million-dollar fine by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission for failing to inform investors of bad oil well news in their annual reports. Suncor was fined for not telling shareholders about its lack of control over a major oil well in Alberta's Bakken formation. The
